USED MANY PITCHERS

Baseball Managers Experienced Much with Boxmen

How hard the managers in the National and American leagues worked last season to build up strong pitching staffs is shown by the fact that in both circuits no less than a total of 203 twirlers took part in championship games. That means an average of nearly thirteen pitchers for each of the games for each of the sixteen clubs in the two circuits. It also means that there were enough pitchers at one time or another in the two leagues during the season to make up twenty-two complete teams and have players left over for utility purposes. Connie Mack by his experimenting with the Athletics made a new record in the number of pitchers used by a major-league club, having employed twenty-seven men who took part in at least one game.

From that number the pitching staffs went down to eight, which was the strength of the two pennant winners, the Red Sox and Phillies. The performances of the extremes of ability were hurled by Rube Marquard when he was with the Giants, and Haas, the schoolboy pitcher tried out by Connie Mack. Marquard was the only major-league twirler to pitch a no-hit game, having turned the trick against Brooklyn on April 15. Haas' performance was against the Yankees when he issued sixteen passes and made three wild pitches in one game. There were ten games in the American league in which pitchers allowed their opponents only one hit. There were nine such games in the National league. Alexander was the leader of the pitchers who came close to the Hall of Fame by pitching four of the one-hit variety. His opponents were Boston, Brooklyn, New York and St. Louis. The other twirlers of the National league to pitch one-hit games were Nelt and Tyler, both of Boston, against Brooklyn; Toney of Cincinnati against Boston; Meadows of St. Louis against Cincinnati, and Ames of St. Louis against the Phillies.

In the American league Loudermilk of the Browns held Cleveland to one hit twice; Wood of Boston, Boland and Detroit and Gallia of Washington also pitched one-hit games against Cleveland; Shore of the Sox turned the trick against the Athletics; Bressler of the Athletics and Morton of Cleveland did it against the Yankees; Dubuc of Detroit pitched a one-hit game against Washington and Scott of the White Sox turned in one against the Athletics. Grover Alexander and Walter Johnson led their respective leagues in pitching shutout ball and strikeouts. The former blanked his opponents ten times and retired 229 batters on strikes. Johnson had eight shutouts to his credit and fanned 198 batters. —Bat Wright in the Troy Times.

MRS. ANGLE TO REMARRY

Woman Acquitted of Murder Will Remarry Her Husband

Stamford, Conn., Oct. 27.—That Mrs. Helen M. Angle, who was acquitted in March last of causing the death of Waldo R. Ballou, is about to remarry her former husband, Frank W. Angle, was admitted in Bridgeport today by Mr. Angle.

Mrs. Angle is the daughter of Leonard Blondel, a retired business man of Stamford. She is engaged in office work at present in Stamford. During her trial for manslaughter following the finding of Mr. Ballou in a dying condition on the sidewalk in front of her apartment Mr. Angle was a frequent visitor to the courtroom. He has often been in her company since. He is employed by the Union Metallic Cartridge Company in Bridgeport.

The Angles were married in Stamford on September 21, 1898. They separated in October, 1902, and in February, 1911, Mrs. Angle obtained a divorce on the ground of desertion. Her husband did not contest the suit. Mrs. Angle has greatly improved in health since her trial. She visits friends here frequently and the knowledge of her coming marriage is more or less general among them, although none will say anything definite about the date or place. Mr. Angle says it will take place Saturday.

Late on the night of June 23, 1914, a policeman found Waldo R. Ballou, an aged ex-city Councilman of Stamford, known to be a suitor for the hand of Mrs. Helen M. Angle, dying, his head badly crushed, on the steps of the Rippowam Building, Stamford. Mrs. Angle, daughter of a retired contractor and real estate man said to be wealthy, had a music studio on the third floor of the building and Ballou had been calling on her that night.

Following Ballou's death, which occurred about an hour after he was found by the policeman, Mrs. Angle was first held as a material witness without bail, released for eight days, arrested again, and again released on bail until, on March 3, 1915, she was placed on trial at Bridgeport on the charge of having murdered Ballou.

During the trial, which lasted sixteen days, Mrs. Angle contended on the stand that Ballou had had a few drinks with her and after kissing her good night had fallen on the stairway. She had heard him fall, she said and had carried him to the street door with the hope that fresh air would revive him. The jury deliberated for about an hour and a half and then brought in a verdict of acquittal.
